For the king. Concerning money.

It is ordered the mayor and bailiffs of York that they have sent to London within the octaves of the Assumption of blessed Mary all the following moneys which are due to the king for the king's wines sold in the town of York by John de Swyneford, taker of the king's wines, to be delivered there to Peter de Gisorc', the king's chamberlain of London, to release from store the king's wines of reprice which the said Peter seized for the king's use at the St Botolph's fair last past on the king's orders; to wit, from Adam Cerf for two tuns of wine 8 marks, from Peter Noel for one tun of wine 4 marks, from Geoffrey le Taverner for two tuns of wine 8 marks, from Adam Cerf'. Robert Verdonel and Robert Gra, for 9 tuns of wine £23 4s. And they shall omit this in no way if they want to remain unharmed, implementing this the king's order so that the king shall incur no damage in this behalf on account of their default, for which the king would have to deal seriously with them and theirs.

THE TAVERNERS OF KINGSTON-UPON-HULL (K.U.H)

By J.P. Taverner

The Wyke as Hull was known before 1293 is first recorded in 1198 as land belonging to a monastery - This reference is just 130 years after the Battle of Hastings, although there is no mention of this settlement in the domesday book of 1084. This small grouping of fisherman and traders at the mouth of the river Hull grew steadily during the thirteenth century excepting for a freak storm in 1256 which apparently changed the course of the Hull. By 1269 the port had been rebuilt and was sufficiently large to warrant a massive chain across the Hull to restrict access. However it was King Edward I (1272-1307) who recognised it's strategic importance as a port and fortification. In 1278 the Wyke was granted a market by Edward. In 1285 the main church, Holy Trinity was begun, in 1289 The Carmelite Friary was founded, but the most important event for the future of the Wyke was that in 1293 King Edward I acquired the vill of Wyke, together with the adjoining land. It comprised 55 messuages (farms) and 55 undeveloped plots mainly along Hull Street (now High Street).

As well as it's importance as a shipping port (exporting wool and wheat to flanders, it would import wine and other commodities that this area of England required), was its key location in King Edward's war with Scotland. Hull could be used for provisioning his troops, and would be required to provide shipping in times of war.

As early as 1293 when the first detailed survey of the Kings' newly acquired property was made, a Roger le Taverner held an important amount of land in the Wyke, and as we shall see between him and his son Hugh, they were to own about 20% of the New Town of Kingston-Upon-Hull. In 1299 the King granted the New Town it's first charter. The next year (1300) the King visited Hull on his way to invade Scotland. By 1303 roads were being built to neighbouring towns and in 1314 in the reign of King Edward II the black friars monastery was founded.

1316 saw a ferry service across the Humber to Barton begin and 1 year later is the first mention of shops in Hull. To help pave the streets, which must have been knee deep in mud, a toll was levied for 7 years on goods imported and exported, this is the period 1318-1325. In 1320 an inquisition was held to asses the value and ownership of the messuages in Hull, probably in anticipation of a licence which was issued in 1322 to fortify the town.

In the collection of ancient deeds held a Kingston-Upon-Hull records office some of the very first records comprise land transactions by the Taverners of Hull. The Taverners were bailiffs of the town and in 1359 John Taverner was Mayor of the town. In 1331 the town administration which had been under the guidance of 1 bailiff was increased to a mayor and 4 bailiffs. The next year King Edward the Third visited Hull.

In 1337 the 100 years war with France began, and Hull was to provide ships and men for the King. In fact during 1359, the year when John Taverner was mayor, the town provided 16 ships and 466 seamen - an amazing achievement for such a small place. I must digress here to mention the fact that Geoffrey Chaucer was born in London in 1343. This seemingly irrelevant fact will take on importance in another part of the Taverner's history.

We should also put the story into historical context by mentioning the year 1347 which was when plague or the black death devastated Europe and up to 75 million people died. The same year by coincidence the most detailed survey was carried out of all the plots of land in Hull, which because the land to the left, right and bottom of each plot was described enables a complete picture of Hull to be created. After 1350 references to the Taverners are few and the plots owned by the Taverners seem to have all been sold during the 1370's.

There seems to be a gap in my records, because the Taverners in the guise of John Taverner are still prominent merchants in the next century in 1421-1422 John is recorded as a bailiff of Hull.

The next, and most intriguing references involves King Henry VI. In 1448 the war between England and Scotland flared again and once more we record in the same year a visit to Hull by King Henry VI. During his stay he launched a ship "The Grace of God" built by John Taverner the ship is described as "the largest England had ever seen", more of this later.

I now have to jump another time gap to the year 1540. Henry VIII married Ann of Cleves. The marriage was annulled by the convocation of Canterbury and York. Henry then married Katherine Howard his fifth wife, sometime during 1540 Henry visited Hull. Having dissolved the monasteries earlier in his reign Henry had plenty of church land to give away to his favourites and in 1540 he gave two pieces of land in Hull to Richard, Robert and Roger Taverner, who we met in Volume 1 of the Taverners, see P17 & seq. By coincidence the same land owned by the Taverners two hundred years earlier.

It is not exaggeration to say that the Taverners were one of Hulls founding families.

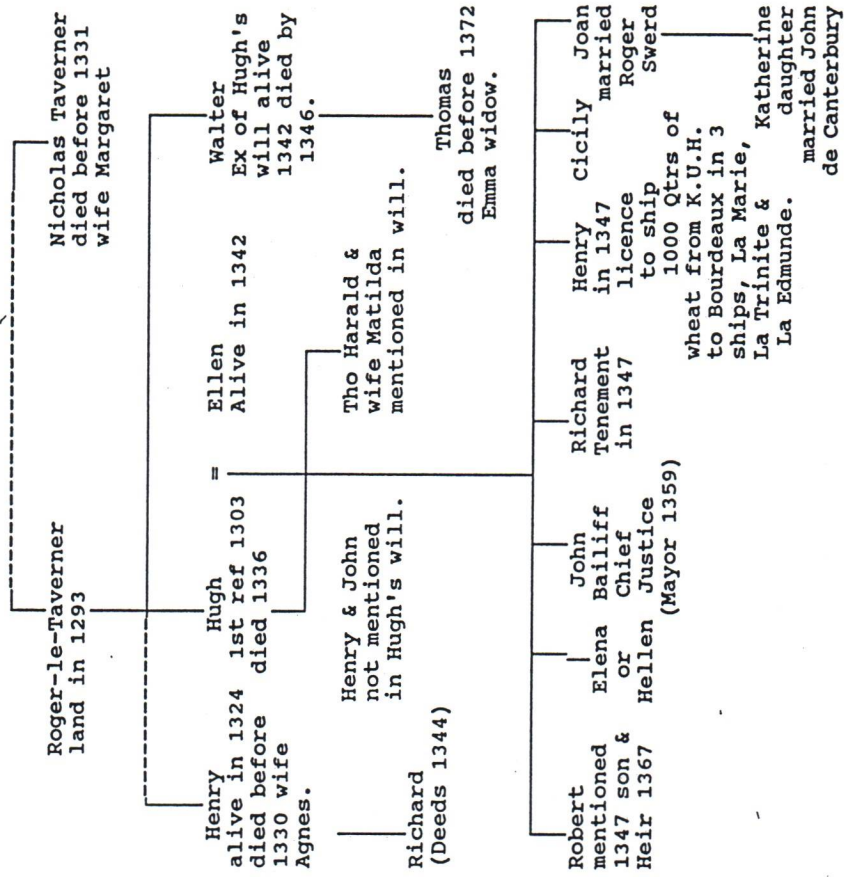

Although I have been able to spend only 1 day in the records office at Hull, I am indeed indebted to the staff there and to Margaret Horrox who has written two magnificent books about early Hull, 1 is published, the other is in manuscript form, and I hope will be published soon. The work of retrieving and transcribing material has therefore been mostly done for me.

Mrs Horrux has painstakingly pieced together all the plots or messages as they were known in the 12th Century and she lists a number of plots owned by The Taverners. (refer to the plan attached to identify the situations of the plots within Hull).

Rosemary Horrux lists the following Taverner relationships:-

Plot No:	Name & Relationship
20, 21, 79, 143, 158, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176.	Roger Taverner.
4, 7, 20, 21, 22, 72, 100, 138, 140, 147, 158, 172, 173, 184, 185, 195.	Hugh, son of Roger.
7, 100, 140, 173.	Ellen wife of Hugh.
100.	Helen or Elena daughter of Hugh.
4, 16, 18, 135, 173.	Henry son of Hugh.
185.	John son of Hugh.
22.	Richard son of Hugh.
135, 170, 195.	Robert son of Hugh.
127, 128.	Nicholas.
128.	Margaret, widow of Nicholas.
135.	Richard son of Henry.
79, 173.	Thomas.
79, 173	Emma wife of Thomas.
20, 79, 100, 145.	Walter.
4, 16, 18.	Agnes wife of Henry.
16 & 47	Richard Taverner Circa 1540 Robert Taverner Circa 1540 Roger Taverner Circa 1540

From her list, the deeds and will I have generated the family tree below. The dotted lines are probable but not proven relationships.

The Taverner connection with Hull was suggested by a couple of paragraphs from a researcher in the 1930's who summarised his work as follows:-

HULL

"The name Taverner is of course one of the oldest of Hull names" writes Mr L.M. Stanewell on 29.8.1930.

Roger le Taverner held land in Wyke 1293 and in High Street in 1320.

Hugh le Taverner and his wife Ellen also held land in the High Street in 1320.

John Taverner Bailiff of Hull in 1347 and Walter Taverner are both mentioned in the recital to the Rental of Hull in 1347, and several Taverners held land in the town.

John Taverner Burgess in 1421-22 when he is described as a Mariner.

Extracts from Hull notes from local newspapers:

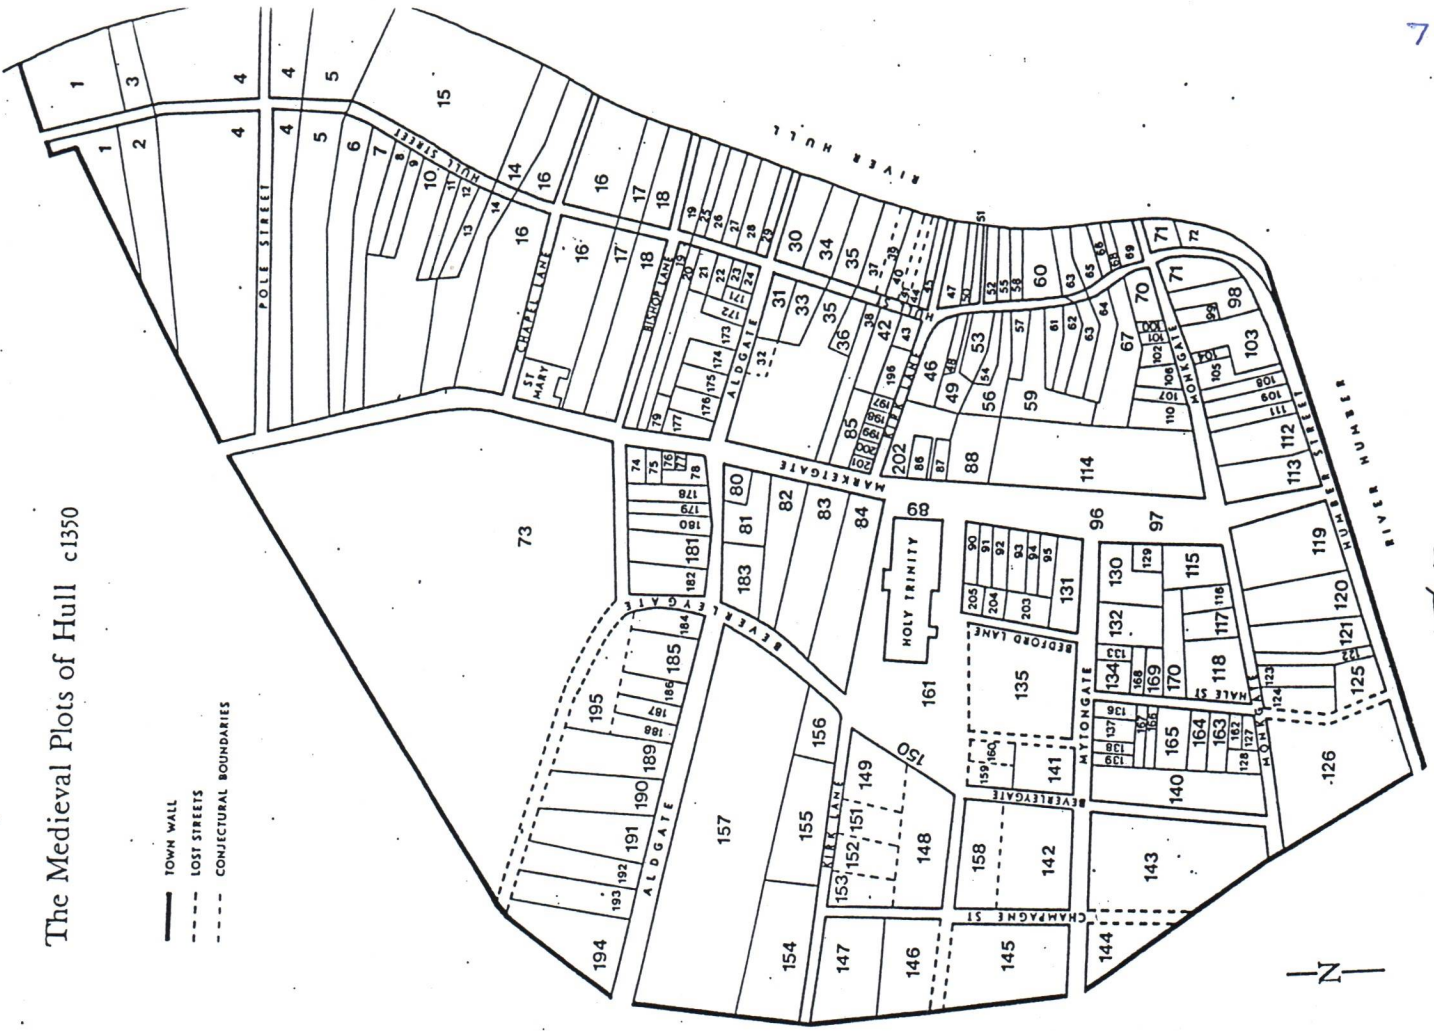

In 1449 Henry VI granted several privileges to John Taverner a merchant - shipowner of Hull who had built the largest ship ever seen in England and which the King himself christened naming her "The Grace of God". He obtained a licence to ship goods from London, Southampton, Hull and Sandwich.

A coincidence? That Taverners were prominent merchant mariners in all these ports?

The above summary gives a brief overview of the first 350 years of The Wyke and Kingston-on-Hull in the context of the Taverners. We can look at the detailed information concerning the family in a number of different ways, by the plot numbers, by the individuals or by the deeds.

Margaret Horrox has prepared a map of Hull according to the 1347 inquisition and on it she has superimposed the plots of land listed in the inquisition, and she has numbered the plots. A copy of her plan is attached and the plots described according to her system.

The Medieval Plots of Hull c1350

1293, Roger Taverner is listed as owning 3 properties, and either owned a lot more he did not mention, or acquired a lot more land between 1293 and his death. I have not been able to find his will, but his son & heir was Hugh or Hugo. Hugo made a number of land transactions before his death in 1336. His will exists, and in it he leaves various properties to his sons. This will together with various descriptions and assessments made for tax reasons help identify the land owned by the Taverners.

To the bailiffs of Great Yarmouth:

At the complaint of Hugh le Taverner of Kyngeston-on-Hull that whereas he had loaded at Le Sluse in Flanders a ship belonging to him and Geoffrey de Sprotteley called La Nicholas of Kyngeston-on-Hull with cloth and other goods of his to the value of £48 6s 8d, in order to bring the same to Kyngeston-on-Hull to trade there with the same, certain malefactors of the power of Robert county of Flanders attacked and slew the men and mariners in the ship whilst sailing to England and took the ship and goods with them to the port of the Swyn, the king frequently requested the count to cause justice to be done to Hugh; but he has not done so, as appears by the letters patent of the community of the town of Kyngeston-on-Hull under their common seal: wherefore the king orders the bailiffs to arrest goods of the men and merchants of the power of the count to the value of £58 6s 8d, at which Hugh's goods and his portion of the ship are appraised, and to detain them until Hugh have been satisfied for that sum and his damages or until otherwise ordered, certifying the king of their proceedings and of the goods arrested by them.

By the council.

To Richard Fitz Dieu:

Because the king has learned by inquisition taken by William de la Pole, master John de Barton and Hugh le Taverner, in the presence of the said Richard, that the following merchants caused a ship called la Katherine, whose master was Baldwin Skipper, to be loaded at the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed to be taken thence to parts beyond, with the following goods which they bought and provided, before 1 March last, to wit:

- Baldwin Skipper                    3 sarplers of wool and of woolfells and 1/2 last of hides
- Lambert Rumbek, John Normaund, Peter Machiner, James Tonerlot, Paulinus Cumono and Conrad Conemagh of Flanders
- 18 sarplers of wool and of woolfells and 1 last
- 17 dickers of hides, and 8 hides
- Albert de Swyperford, Alvinus de Brake and Godelinus de la Reule of Almain
- 27 sarplers of wool and woolfells and 1 1/2 lasts of hides

and the ship remained loaded with the wool, &c. on the said 1 March at the said town, and the merchants paid their customs for the same, and received their coket for them, and that the said merchants had not communicated with any men of Scotland after the outbreak of war between the king and the Scots, and had not joined the Scots against the king, and that Richard had arrested the ship, &c., upon pretext of an order from the king directing him to arrest any shop charged with divers things of the Scots in the port of Kyngeston-upon-Hull: the king therefore orders him to restore to the said merchants their ship, &c., without delay, and to permit them to do what they please therewith.

To the treasurer and barons of the exchequer:

Whereas the king lately granted to queen Philippa £1000 to be received from the issues of the old and new customs in the port of Kyngeston-upon-Hull by the hands of the collectors there, in aid of her expenses, and ordered the collectors to deliver the issues of the said customs to her until she had received the whole sum of £1000, and Adam Coppendale and Hugh le Taverner, then collectors there, paid £938 8s 8d to the merchants of the society of the Bardi of Florence, who had satisfied the queen for the money, and £61 11s 4d remained to be paid to the said merchants, as appears by a bill under the seal of W. bishop of Norwich, late treasurer, wherefore the king ordered the collectors to pay the latter sum to the said merchants, or to John de Wyn, their attorney, and John de Barton and Henry de Burton, then collectors of those customs, did so; the king therefore orders the treasurer and barons to cause allowance for this sum to be made to the said John and Henry in their accounts.

Appointment of John Taverner, esquire, to take carpenters, smiths, sawyers, shipwrights and other workmen to build the king's ship Grace de Dieu, and timber, iron and carriage therefor, and all other things necessary. By privy seal, &c.

K. H. H.

Henry VI granted several privileges to John Taverner, a merchant shipowner, of Hull who had built the largest ship ever seen in England and which the King himself christened naming her "The Grace of God". Alice was granted to him that he should export wool, tin, skins, leather and other merchandise from the ports of London, Southampton, Hull and Sandwich from the English and foreign merchants, and freely carry the same through the straights of Morocco to Italy. He paying aliens duty upon the same and upon such expectations he would in return bring such merchandise as were most wanted in England as Bow-Staves, wax etc, whereby a great increase of the duties and customs of the crown would ensue and much gain to the subject.
